TODAY IN HEADBÄNGER HISTORY

April 6, 1993 – Peter Criss, former drummer for the rock group KISS, settles a libel lawsuit against Star magazine for portraying him as a homeless alcoholic. "At least now I can go on with a clearer head, now that this is over," he said. "I could write a song about this whole thing. Maybe I will." A Jan. 8, 1991, story in the Star said Criss was "living like a dog," getting his meals on bread lines and sleeping in a men's room at the Santa Monica Pier. It was all a hoax.

April 6, 1956 – The iconic Capitol Records Tower opens at the corner of Hollywood and Vine in LA. The 13-story building is said to be designed to look like a stack of records, but the architect says that is just a coincidence.
